Were We Biased?

• . . . Strong exception must be taken to the article “Bible Bill Aberhart” (issue of Oct. 1-7).

The preview of this radio program is biased with such phrases as “Sinister, Comic;” “scoundrel,” “razzle-dazzle economic line;” etc.

There are a number of statements which seem to me to border on the untruth, “He began to preach a new doctrine of Social Credit . . .”. It is my information that he expounded the doctrine of Social Credit as advanced by Major Douglas.

“... And do away with money . . .”
—Surely no one can believe this statement!

“But once in office Aberhart found his theories collapsing in the face of reality, and finally his great plans ground to a standstill.” Is it not true that the only theory that collapsed was his (belief) that the Social Credit proposals could be carried out on the provincial level? Since the Social Credit proposals were never tried, they never had the chance to collapse. Is it not also true that other steps were taken after Aberhart’s initial measures were declared ultra vires, perhaps culminating in the Alberta Bill of Rights passed by the provincial legislature under Premier Manning? Certainly his great plans did not grind to a standstill.

Did the late Premier Aberhart try to “run” the banks, or to regulate them?

I was going to mention the “attempt to reduce the freedom of the press,” but that was exactly what was attempted. Perhaps it would have been more correct to have said he tried to reduce the licence of the press. Space in the press would have been available to any party taking issue with slanted news items concerning themselves.

“... The Legislature didn’t want him any more.”—If this statement was true, he could not have remained Premier until his death.

All in all, this article appears to have been written by someone with an axe to grind, and not meant to be presented as an impartial preview of a radio program. — G.A.G., Edmonton.

Adherence to Schedule

• . . . I know you cannot arrange programs that will suit everyone, but I think we have a right to expect that your programs will come on as advertised in the “Times.” Now, this afternoon (Oct. 22) there was a program advertised from 3:30 to 4:27 I wished to see, but was prevented from seeing (because) a football game was allowed to overlap the time of the—more desirable programs. I called the office to enquire as to the reason for this and was somewhat curtly informed by the lady who answered the telephone . . . that they could not cut out a program once it was begun.

Now, to my way of thinking, two hours of that sort of thing on a Sunday afternoon is a great plenty, but to have it overlap into the time of other programs to the extent of 30 minutes is just too much.

May we expect that in the future the programs will come on as stated in the “Times,” or can we expect to find them set up as they were this afternoon?—W.G., Winnipeg.

Sporting events that run overtime present one of the network’s greatest problems—one for which there seems no happy solution. Perhaps this reader could put himself in the position of the sports fans who avidly had watched the game for two hours. As it stretched into the later stages, tension and excitement mounted. Had the telecast of the game been ended abruptly, leaving the fans suspended without knowing the outcome, one could imagine the reaction.

At the same time, likely the sports fans could see this reader’s point of view—after waiting patiently through two hours of a telecast that didn’t interest him, he met only with disappointment.

About the only consolation we can offer is that the football season soon will be drawing to a close, and those who are not interested in this sport will be able to find more programs of interest to them in the schedule.

We trust that this viewer will recognize that many other programs of the 100,000 presented annually by the CBC are planned to satisfy his personal tastes.

A Book For All Seasons

"I'm never quite sure whether there is such a thing as 'holiday reading'. It seems to me that a book either interests you or it doesn't, whether you're on holiday or not." — Muriel Dole, in a BBC talk.

MARKING THE CBC's 25th anniversary, the following letter has been received by President J. A. Ouimet from the Board of Broadcast Governors:

Dear Mr. Ouimet: At their meeting on October 19, the Board of Broadcast Governors noted that the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation is this year marking the completion of 25 years of service to the people of Canada.

Broadcasting in Canada has been continuously directed toward the objectives of a varied and comprehensive service of a high standard that is basically Canadian in content and character. As Canadians we share the pride of those directly associated with the Corporation in the contribution of the CBC to these ends. As members of the Board we are conscious of the essential part which must be taken by the Corporation in the continuing pursuit of the national purposes. We, therefore, extend both congratulations on the record of high achievement and good wishes for the future.

We would be grateful if you could find the means of conveying these sentiments to all those who take part in the operations of the Corporation. Yours sincerely (signed) Andrew Stewart, Chairman.

A NOTED CANADIAN pianist, Marylou Dawes, will be featured performer Tuesday, November 14, on Recital in Miniature, broadcast from Winnipeg. Among the works she will play is a Sonatine composed by her husband, Lauren Kolbinson, who has studied composition with Murray Adaskin.

Miss Dawes holds a diploma received after four years of study at the Vienna State Academy of Music, during which she received the highest marks in her piano class. The first two years of her study there were financed by a scholarship granted by the University of Alberta.

She completed her studies in 1959, returning to Canada. She lived for a while in Montreal, giving sonata recitals with violinist Kenneth Perkins for which she received noteworthy reviews in the Toronto and Montreal press. A recital she gave in Toronto was the subject of a feature in Maclean's Magazine, July, 1960.

Marylou Dawes has received recognition for her interpretation of Canadian compositions, and has had music written for her and dedicated to her by several of this country's composers, including Oscar Morawitz.

She has frequently been heard on CBC both as a piano soloist (from Edmonton and Montreal) and as accompanist (from Saskatoon, January, 1960). Her most recent broadcast was from Montreal in August, 1960.

SUNDAY CHORALE, CBC Radio's Sunday evening program of religious song, will originate from the chapel of Mennonite Brethren College, Winnipeg, on November 12. On this special occasion, Bible students will join with the Choristers in singing the hymns.

Last week it was announced that Sunday Chorale would originate from the University of Manitoba Festival of the Arts on November 5. Arrangements could not be completed for this special appearance of the choir, however.

On Our Cover . . .

Presiding over the shenanigans Tuesday evenings on his hour-long comedy and variety show is affable Garry Moore. He and his cohorts go through a smattering of rib-tickling skits and musical numbers each week that leave audiences asking for more.

Here's How to Survive A NUCLEAR ATTACK

The CBC has been entrusted with an important job in Canada's Civil Defence: that of maintaining contact with the population in the event of an atomic attack. Monday night, CBC television and radio will demonstrate how this contact will be established.

THE CBC COULD be your key to survival in the event of a national emergency in the nuclear age. Working with the Emergency Measures Organization, the CBC is co-ordinating all publicly and privately-owned radio and television stations into a single national network capable of immediately reaching 97 per cent of the Canadian population.

This Monday, as part of EMO's Exercise Tocsin B, the radio section of this national network will be in operation for 90 minutes. During this broadcast, the public will hear messages of the type that would be broadcast in a real emergency. The program also is designed to inform individuals of the importance of personal plans for a war emergency. Prior to the exercise

Canadian radio stations will emphasize that the broadcast is part of an exercise. (Tocsin B is the third in a series of exercises to test and practice emergency plans.) Throughout the broadcast the public will be reminded that an exercise is in progress.

The exercise, which will be held November 13 and 14, will test the extent to which the gaps in planning that were apparent in the exercise last May have been corrected.

He Hoodwinked the 'Art Experts'

Based on the fantastic but true story of Hans van Meegeren, "Masterpiece" is presented Wednesday on Playdate

IN 1945 ONE of the most sensational art scandals of modern times came to light when Hans van Meegeren, a 55-year-old Dutch painter, confessed to the Dutch police that he had faked eight "old masters." Van Meegeren painted them mostly in the style of Jan Vermeer (1632-1675), one of the greatest of the Dutch masters, and sold them for a total of almost three million dollars. They had fooled some of the world's leading art critics. The paintings were not copies; they were originals executed with many of the characteristic techniques of Vermeer or Franz Hals, which van Meegeren, a talented craftsman, had studied minutely.

The motive? Revenge. Van Meegeren said he did not paint the pictures for money, but to get even with the art critics who seemed blind to his ability. His first attempt was an unusually beautiful canvas showing Christ breaking bread with his disciples at Emmaus. It was hailed in 1938 as a Vermeer work of rare technical and spiritual value by a select group of leading Netherlands art critics, and was hung in the Boymans Museum in Rotterdam, which had bought it for about $280,000.

One of van Meegeren's "Vermeer" forgeries found its way into the hands of Herman Goering (for $256,000), and started all the trouble. After the Second World War the Allied Art Commission, trying to recover looted art treasures, found it in a cave near Salzburg, traced it back through various hands, found that van Meegeren had been involved in the deal, and arrested him for collaboration with the Nazis.

To save himself being shot as a collaborator, he made his fabulous claim that he had not only painted that picture but several other "old masters" by Peter de Hooch, Gerard Terborch and Franz Hals. To substantiate his claim he painted another "Vermeer" in the presence of police witnesses and other officials. In 1947 he was sentenced to a year in prison on charges of fraud, and died six weeks later of a heart disease.

A drama by Gordon Russell and Larry Ward, titled Masterpiece, based on the van Meegeren case, will be seen Wednesday on CBC-TV's Playdate. It stars Powys Thomas, director of the National Theatre School in Montreal, as Hans van Maasdijk, the middle-aged artist accused of fraud; Mavor Moore as an elderly art critic; and Mary Savidge as van Maasdijk's wife, Marie.

To conceal his activities while working on the painting, van Meegeren had a secret studio built in the loft of his country home at

Laren. The entrance was cleverly hidden between the beams of the roofing. He worked under the powerful beams of daylight lamps, spending weeks and sometimes months on fine detail. He faked the cracks on the canvas with a special process, reconstructed frames from old wood, but made the mistake of using various articles in his compositions which were later found around his house.

One of the most embarrassing aspects of the case was that respectable art critics in Dutch and foreign galleries had to admit they had been duped, thus shedding doubt on their trustworthiness as future guides to genuine art. That was why van Meegeren was asked to paint another picture in the Vermeer style, to compare with the others he claimed to have painted. The result was Jesus Teaching in the Temple, which he finished in two months without the usual intensive sketches, without his complete chemical equipment, and with silent and unsympathetic strangers watching his every move. He made a point of using all the famous Vermeer colours, the secret of which he apparently had re-discovered, particularly the characteristic blue, only possible by using the costly lapis lazuli, finely ground, in the mixture.

When the test painting was completed the critics couldn't agree on whether or not van Meegeren could have painted the other eight, so scientific tests were conducted. X-ray and chemical analysis revealed that van Meegeren had scraped off old canvasses and used them for his fakes; that the blackish substance in the cracks of his "Vermeers" was not genuine dirt, as it should have been; that traces of a modern pigment unavailable to 17th-century artists were found in his paints. The scientific evidence was conclusive. The paintings were van Meegeren's, not old masters. They also showed genuine artistry of a high calibre. But van Meegeren didn't live to enjoy even this small anodyne.

HOW TO SURVIVE A NUCLEAR ATTACK

Later Monday night, CBC television's Camera Canada presents a 60-minute documentary on the Emergency Measures Organization. The program, titled Tocsin, will explain what EMO does in the case of a national emergency, how it co-operates with the Canadian Army and how the CBC figures in the defence planning of the country. The other two services and the facilities of the Defence Research Board, support and assist the Army in the survival field.

The program, produced by Norman Caton, begins with film shots of the federal warning centre in Ottawa and shows how the defence plans for Canada are set into operation once an enemy attack is known. A demonstration of what Canadians might expect to happen in the case of a real alert and how the EMO goes into operation will also be seen. Other segments of the program include how the destructive power of bombs and the density of fallout are measured; how to prepare defence against radioactive fallout; the CBC role in being Canadians' lone contact with EMO and Army headquarters; how the federal government gives the role of national defence to the Army, which is responsible for the re-entry phase after a nuclear attack and which works with civil defence units in rescue operations; how the nuclear detector network measures the height, bearing and force of explosions across the country; how predicted fallout is plotted and how the information is given to the CBC for broadcast to the areas concerned.

Other films to be seen include footage from Arnprior, Ontario, location of the Civil Defence College, where night rescue exercises are held with people, rather than dummies, being used as victims of simulated fire and blast from bombs; and some taken at Guelph, showing how a typical small Canadian town or city sets up its own defence system and assists in the evacuation programs of larger cities.

R. B. Curry, director of EMO, will be interviewed and will explain what EMO is and what its role will be in the event of a nuclear attack on Canada. Narrator and writer for the program is Blair Fraser. Thom Benson is supervising producer.

The object of the single national network which the CBC is responsible for co-ordinating is to integrate broadcasting with the Army's siren warning system, which first warns the public of an impending emergency by a network of sirens across the country. Once warned, Canadians would get information and instructions by radio almost immediately.

Direct links now exist between key CBC stations and Army regional warning centres in Canada. These centres are connected to Defence Headquarters in Ottawa, from where the Army directs its national civil defence program together with EMO.

The emergency broadcast network would be set up by linking together CBC's present national networks and adding other radio and television stations to them. It is expected that the network could be in full operation within a few minutes following an order from Defence Headquarters. The Army believes it would get 15 to 20 minutes' warning of a nuclear attack.

All radio and television stations would come under Government control immediately, under emergency conditions, as stipulated in an order-in-council approved in 1958.

The CBC would take its instructions directly from the Army, the service charged with the organization and co-ordination of civil defence measures. Radio would be the main medium for the transmission of official information. Most, if not all, television and FM stations would go off the air after

Pia Colombo

There exists in Paris, on the left bank of the Seine, an intimate little café, one of thousands in Paris, but with a very special flavour.

Every night of the week, it greets a capricious and demanding clientele, song lovers all, and severe critics.

One evening in 1956, a young singer who had first dreamed of becoming a dancer, then a comedienne, came on stage with a touching and poetic program of songs. Since then, Pia Colombo has become THE star of L'Ecluse and of its patrons.

In 1958, she hit the Olympia with Georges Brassens, himself a relative newcomer in the field — and the public went mad.

Her success at L'Ecluse and other posh and exclusive clubs is perhaps due to Miss Colombo's own capricious mind. For she does not sing just anything . . . as a matter of fact, her repertoire is quite limited: Brassens, Guy Béart, Jacques Brel to name a few, and her husband Maurice Fanon.

CBWFT viewers will meet Pia Colombo in her first visit to Canada, Sunday, November 12 at 8:30 p.m., on the program Music-Hall.

Red Army Chorus

Immediately following Pia Colombo's recital on Music-Hall, the Red Army Chorus will present an hour-long recital of folk songs and dances, recorded during their recent visit to Canada.

The Red Army Chorus' success is legend. Following such internationally famous choirs and dance groups as the Piatnisky Chorus, the Svetchnikov Choir and the Veronezh and Siberian ensembles, the Red Army Chorus has attained the ultimate in professional performance and firmly established itself at the head of them all.

Their performance will include several Canadian folk songs.

Adolescents in the Family

Two new programs highlight the week on CBWFT—both serials. Sunday November 12, at 11:00 p.m., Vous, familles presents itself as a study of the social, physical and human problems of Canadian homes today.

Vous, familles will include statistics, interviews and documentaries. Among Where's Gerald Pratley?

He's Gone to the Movies!

"OH GERRY! . . . Where is that boy? Gone to the 'flicks?' Not again! That's four times this week. Well, I never!"

This was a regular refrain in London, England, when Gerald Pratley was about six, and what at first was an entrancing hobby developed into a highly satisfying and unusual profession that has made him "Canada's only internationally recognized authority on the film and film music."

"At first," he says, "films for me were just an exciting excursion into make-believe. Then I began to realize that the cinema is the only medium that can express anything it wants to. It can go into the past, or the future, anywhere, anyhow. There are hardly any bounds to its possibilities. This appealed enormously to my imagination, which has always been raring to go. As I grew older I became interested in how movies were made, and the people involved behind the scenes. From a movie-star fan I became a movie fan."

He began to study his subject seriously, in libraries and, of course, in his regular stamping ground, the theatre balcony. One of the first books he read about films was Roger Manvell's Penguin book, Film. "Little did I think that Manvell and I would later become friends."

Pratley decided he wanted to work in films—perhaps become a director. The Second World War kept him champing at the bit in a factory. At war's end he knocked on film company doors in England, with no luck. Then he heard that the National Film Board in Canada was the place for young men with serious ideas about film-making. He set out for Canada aboard the Empire McKendrick, a converted aircraft carrier, in the summer of 1946, with dreams of making his practical and imaginative ideas about film production become reality.

The NFB was interested, but its vacancies all had been promised to war veterans. Pratley sold a few articles on films and performers to weekly papers, and then obtained a job with the CBC continuity department in Toronto. He spent most of his spare time and cash at the movies, studying film techniques. Then he had an idea. If he couldn't work in films himself, he could interpret film production, performances and music for others interested in the movies.

During his six years in continuity he launched the radio programs that have made his international reputation as an authority on motion picture science. He started in March, 1948, with This Week at the Movies, over CJBC, Toronto. Later he dropped out of it. But his Movie Scene, begun in August, 1948, and his Music From the Films (read by announcer Frank Herbert), begun in April, 1949, still are popular features. He's heard frequently on Audio, the CBC morning show on Trans-Canada radio, and Assignment, a CBC Dominion network feature heard week nights. A couple of weeks ago he began writing a Saturday column called The Film Scene for the Toronto Star.

The Movie Scene and Music From the Films are the only regular network shows of their kind on the continent, Pratley says. In The Movie Scene (Saturdays, on Trans-Canada), he interviews authorities on the art of film-making, and there is hardly one of any importance, from William Wyler to Federico (Please turn to page 25)

Editorial deadlines usually are a headache.

This one today is just that—because upcoming on the CBC television network are some interesting events that bear watching, and the only difficulty in trying to talk about a couple of them is an inability to predict the future.

Football and hockey dominate the television screen this week.

Western conference football playoffs take most of the spotlight—with the second game of the total-points semi-final between the Calgary Stampeders and Edmonton Eskimos and the first game of the final between the Blue Bombers and the winner of the semi-finals also on the card.

I expect to see Edmonton and Winnipeg in the final for the 11th time since 1950. This is no under-rating of the Calgary Stampeders. Bobby Dobb's ball club has come out of a tailspin to reach the playoffs, but it was such hard work climbing to that plateau, there couldn't be too much left for the playoffs.

Edmonton, on the other hand, was a well-rested football team when the playoffs got underway, with only two games in a month. This can work against a team, but only when the team doesn't have such a valuable performer as Jackie Parker.

Presuming, then, that it will be Edmonton and Winnipeg in the western conference final, what can we expect? This will be another drag-'em-out series of the type these clubs have played many times in the past. Personnel keeps altering, but the pattern of (Please turn to page 29) carrying initial warning instructions. All AM radio stations would broadcast on their normal frequencies.

The Emergency Measures Organization of the Privy Council Office was organized in 1957 when the federal government, after studying the implications of nuclear war, decided that if Canada was to survive such a war, government itself must become involved in civil emergency planning to a greater degree than ever before. EMO was to be generally responsible for the development of programs directed toward the survival of Canada as a nation. The Federal Civil Defence Headquarters of the Department of National Health and Welfare still continued to devote its attention to matters which were more directly related to the survival of the population.

In 1959, however, the federal government decided that civil defence functions should be re-assigned to other departments of government. The EMO became the government's main co-ordinating agency in the whole field of civil emergency planning. Civil defence, in Canada, had been developed to reduce the impact of bombing attacks upon civil population and relied to a great extent upon the recruitment and training of volunteers to deal with the activities which would arise as a result of such attacks. This concept had been adequate for relatively small scales of attack but the destructive potential of nuclear weapons rendered the concept meaningless.

Population survival measures could not be effective in the age of nuclear weapons unless the full weight of government was brought to bear on the problem. Hence a new concept of civil defence was evolved, and it is upon this concept that provincial and municipal governments are being encouraged to develop their emergency planning. Civil defence is not an organization of government but is the function or activity of government during periods of emergency.

Steve Bloomer, host of CBC-TV's natural-science series This Living World—which started Saturday, Oct. 14,—often has amusing unpredictable and, sometimes, exciting experiences with animals which appear on the program.

A 400-pound African lion named King Solomon once became excited and drew blood from an attendant who was trying to quiet him down. Shortly afterwards, Solomon spotted an ibis in the studio and took off in hot pursuit. When the King got his paws wet in the studio pond it seemed to dampen his spirits and he gave up the chase.

"When you share billing with tigers and raccoons, plenty is bound to happen," says Bloomer.

Fellini, who hasn't been on the program in its 13 years. Pratley also reviews new films and books on the cinema, includes sound tracks of scenes, news of current film developments, of NFB and other Canadian film activities and film society events.

"I don't just concern myself with movies that come into local theatres each week. There are many new foreign films and film ideas Canadian audiences may never have a chance to sample, but I think they should know about." He sees an average of five regular films a week, attends special showings of foreign and Canadian films, and reads some 25 film magazines a month.

Pratley's Music From the Films (Sundays, CBC Dominion), has helped considerably to popularize film background music as music in its own right. In this series some of the world's leading film composers talk about their work, with recorded examples. Currently Pratley is presenting recorded music from the French cinema (examples of which he brought back from Paris a few months ago), to illustrate the great changes recently effected in the scoring for French films.

To gather interviews and first-hand colour material for his programs, Pratley makes frequent trips to film production centres and festivals, and film and broadcast companies co-operate in filling his requests for interviews and commentaries when he can't get away to record them himself. This year he went twice to England, to Hollywood, to the Moscow Film Festival, and the Regina Conference of Film Censors. And of course he always attends the film festival at Stratford, Ontario. Last year he went to Cannes and San Francisco, the year before to Edinburgh.

Pratley, although unassuming and soft-spoken, never finds difficulty in getting film people to talk. "When they recognize that I'm first program will deal with the question: "What IS a family?"

Following a trend set earlier by such serials as Beau temps, mauvais temps, Jeunes visages, etc., the CBC French network now offers a new serial titled Le Mors aux dents (litt: "Runaway") on the problems of growing children and changing adolescents.

Starting Friday November 17 at 8:00 p.m., this new serial by Lise Lavallée will present an intimate glimpse in the lives of industrial families, living in a fictional industrial town of Quebec, where income is insufficient, unemployment frequent, instruction limited and routine quite apparent. In a typical family, for example, we will meet young people working their arms off for a decent living, while a younger brother or sister plugs away at piles of books, trying to complete his or her education.—An ideal climate if there ever was one for family conflicts. Yet, there are no real crises in the life of this family, and the whole situation presents an interesting psychological study.

Janine Sutto, Pierre Boucher, Fernande Larivière and other top-notch comedians star in the series, produced for the CBC by André Bousquet.

seriously interested and knowledgeable about their work, they respond extremely well," he says, "and welcome me into their homes as a friend at our second meeting."

Pratley is an associate member of the British Film Academy (membership is by invitation and limited to those working in the industry), and frequently he is asked to contribute articles on films to magazines. Recently the Canadian Film Institute in Ottawa, which services film societies from coast to coast, wrote to the CBC to say how invaluable Pratley's programs are to them.

Does seeing so many films bore him? Not a bit! His backstage knowledge makes it all the more fun, he says. Eventually, he would like to run his own little theatre. "I don't care if people wouldn't come in droves," he says. "I'd just like a place where interesting films could be shown."

play doesn't. Both clubs will use tested methods. Defences will be strong. It will be up to Jackie Parker, Johnny Bright and Jim Letcavits or Kenny Ploen, Leo Lewis or Funston and Pitts to make the difference.

Many people feel you could stop at Kenny Ploen when you talk about the Bombers. If Ploen is healthy Winnipeg will be extremely difficult to stop. He still remembers last year, when, with only seconds left to play in the third game of the western final, he fumbled to give Edmonton the chance to win the title. They capitalized and went to the Grey Cup, only to be beaten by Ottawa.

This year's meeting will mark the rubber match. Each side has won five western championships at the expense of the other. This western final will make excellent television viewing.

Also this week, television fans get a chance to watch former Edmonton coach Frank Ivy in action as he sends his National Football League St. Louis Cardinals against the powerful Detroit Lions. Ivy's club has had its setbacks this year, mainly because Sam Etcheverry has been hampered by an arm injury and top back John David Crow missed half the season with an ankle ailment. The Cards were rated high in pre-season polls. Now that the injuries are clearing up, they could be worthy of their well-wishers.

Former Canadian Football League players in this game include Bill Glass of the Lions (Saskatchewan Roughriders), Bill Martin of the Lions (Toronto Argonauts), Etcheverry, Dale Meinert, and Ed Henke of the Cards. Etcheverry was with Montreal, Meinert with Edmonton, and Henke with Winnipeg.

One of the National Hockey League's top games of the early season also is on this week's arm-chair fans' schedule. Detroit Red Wings meet the Toronto Maple Leafs. Both of these clubs are expected to be in the Stanley Cup playoffs, and the Leafs, with Johnny Bower playing brilliantly in goal, certainly are headed in the right direction. Detroit, after looking great in exhibition games, had trouble getting started in league play, but now that Sid Abel has made a few switches in his forward lines, they appear ready for a run at the Prince of Wales trophy.

Speaking Personally . . .

PROBABLY THE MOST appealing sound in the world is that of the human voice expressing personal opinion, exploring ideas, reminiscing, giving warmth, immediacy, vividness and new dimension to the printed word. The microphone is capable of bringing out something special in the voice — nuances of personality, accent and meaning that are sometimes overlooked because of the visual distractions of face-to-face encounter with an entertaining conversationalist. And from its inception the CBC has made the most of this feature of radio, in presenting some of the most informative, intriguing and provocative ideas and speakers from across the country and abroad, with intimate glimpses of the world as they see it.

Some are renowned personalities or brilliant thinkers, or both. Others are ordinary men and women who have something of import to say. They represent opinion from left, right and centre, all walks of life, all tastes. Nowhere else on the continent is such a diversity of meaty opinion presented consistently by a radio network.

Some of the most interesting CBC radio talks are heard six nights a week after the CBC news and News Roundup: Our Special Speaker, Sundays; Midweek Review, Wednesdays; Weekend Review, Sundays (News Roundup is not heard on Sundays); and the nine-minute talks heard Tuesdays, Thursdays and Fridays which, beginning this week, will be called Speaking Personally. Subject matter and speakers in this series are less conservative than for Our Special Speaker. Since the nightly series began in 1954 the post-news talk on week-nights has been known as "the program that can't be typed," a cross-section of fascinating people and ideas.

The talk may relate to the day's lead news story one night, and may present a minority personal opinion the next. It may look back into the past or speculate about the future. It is not designed for a specialized audience, but for the ordinary, intelligent listener who enjoys the stimulation of new ideas, even if he doesn't always agree with them.

Speaking Personally is meant to be more than just entertainment. It offers a personal view — a new idea or suggestion, a new look at an old problem, reminiscences, occasionally humour — presented in greater depth than is possible in a quick interview. In all these programs speakers are restricted by very few taboos.

Dorothea Cox, who organizes Speaking Personally, says that in a recent 12-month period 200 talks were given by 130 different speakers — occasionally a speaker will give a series of two or three talks — ranging from an Ontario farmer to the superintendent of a mental hospital. They included authors, foreign correspondents, trade union leader, a retired actor, a sports writer, an engineer, a public relations man, a minister of religion, a science reporter, a lawyer, and a professor. "In the past year," she says, "we have presented a native African, a Canadian Indian and an Eskimo. Scientists have told the story of their own research; teachers, students, housewives, editors and travellers have all brought us accounts of their experiences, their thoughts, their personal opinions. We have had John Bird asking Canadians to choose a national bird, and playing us the songs of those which have found favour in his personal poll on the subject; or Sean O'Casey telling us of his first-hand view of the slave trade in Arabia — a talk which seemed to cause more heart-searching among listeners than any for some time. Two Montreal speakers were heard on successive nights with opposing views on Quebec separation. The Rome correspondent of The Reporter talked about the Mafia in Sicily today; and the Latin American reporter of The Times of London described a new engineering feat in Mexico.

"Miller Stewart asked: How dead is Canadian cock-fighting?; and A.

M. Heisey bitterly enquired: Do political parties really want new members? Visitors to 20 countries offered their own impressions of Singapore, South Africa, Red China, the Soviet Union, Pakistan, Spain, Peru, Poland, etc. Historians recounted interesting episodes from Canadian history. And a Cree Indian lawyer gave his strong personal reaction to the efforts of the Joint Parliamentary Committee on Indian Affairs."

Miss Cox says that audience reaction is lively, and frequently she gets requests for copies of talks for personal use. These are supplied if half-a-dozen or more requests come in for them, but of course they are for personal use only.

"Occasionally," she says, "we have requests to put talks into print from university, trade-union and government department periodicals, as well as consumers' magazines. And sometimes speakers become involved in correspondence with listeners who take issue with them on some point."

Talks for Speaking Personally are recorded all over Canada and in many distant parts of the world—in CBC offices in London, New York, or Paris, at Canadian privately owned stations, on the tape-recorders of freelance broadcasters in Tangiers, Delhi or Buenos Aires. Often foreign radio systems offer their recording facilities in Jamaica, Bonn, Mexico or Rome, and the tapes are rushed to Toronto by air mail.

Perhaps half the speakers are professional broadcasters. But Speaking Personally is open to anyone with something worthwhile to say and the ability to say it well. There is a regular flow of suggestions and material from men and women across Canada and abroad who want to share an experience, an opinion, a reminiscence. And CBC program organizers constantly keep eyes and ears peeled for prospective speakers. They are always delighted to find that rarity—a genuinely humorous speaker. Some time ago organizer Kay McIver read a story in the New York Times Sun- day magazine by a man whose style was so breezy and homespun that she tracked him down and persuaded him to record a radio talk for CBC. He is John Gould, editor of The Enterprise in Lisbon Falls, Maine. On several occasions since then he has set up his tape-recorder in his own kitchen and recorded some of his rollicking stories for CBC listeners.

On Sunday nights Our Special Speaker offers listeners a variety of speakers and serious opinions they probably could not get anywhere else. As the title suggests, there is always something special about the speaker, in at least one of three categories. Program organizer Lewis Miller says he "might be special in that he is either nationally or internationally eminent, with a reputation made in either politics, science, religion, the arts, industry, etc. Less well-known names also qualify if they have something special to tell, some unusually interesting thesis or theory to set forth which has special or public significance. Speakers also qualify if they have been involved in an event of special significance, either current or in the past. An example of an anniversary broadcast that comes to mind is the occasion in November, 1957, when we presented a talk by a British student who had witnessed the Hungarian uprising the year before.

Weekend Review has been a network series since the late 1930's. A panel of three or four speakers—always Canadians—rotate as speakers over a period of a few months. Then a new panel takes over. They offer a consistently Canadian interpretation of world developments not found in any other program.

Midweek Review, begun in 1945, offers analyses and comments on major items in the week's news, Canadian or foreign, economic or political. As a rule it doesn't cover sports or crime. The subject for review is always assigned to the speaker. After the topic has been chosen, program organizer Gordon Cullingham (who is responsible for both review programs) seeks out the best person available, anywhere in the world, to comment on it.

The Many Careers of CBC's Stanley Burke

STANLEY BURKE, CBC correspondent at the United Nations in New York, has had a varied career. The 37-year-old Vancouverite has been skipper of a navy anti-submarine craft, deckhand on a cattle boat, oil-driller, turkey farmer and parliamentary press correspondent.

As permanent UN correspondent, Burke contributes regularly to CBC

news programs, to CBC News-magazine and UN Review on CBC-TV, and to News Roundup and Capital Report on CBC Radio.

The recent death of UN secretary-general Dag Hammarskjöld and subsequent international disputes regarding the selection of a successor has placed more emphasis than ever before on Burke's CBC reports from UN headquarters.

Burke was a natural choice for his present position. He won an international competition for an article assigned by the UN several years ago; this led to a month's stay at the UN in New York, where he was briefed on the world organization's operations and worked for awhile in the information division.

After attending the University of British Columbia, Burke became a reporter on the Vancouver Province.

Following a tour of service with the RCN, Burke decided to become a writer-farmer and studied agriculture at UBC. Embarking on his newly-chosen career, Burke joined the crew of a cattle boat carrying 800 cows to China under the UN Relief and Reconstruction Administration program in the summer of 1947.

Giving up his agricultural aspirations, Burke reverted to writing and worked on newspapers in Vancouver, New Westminster and Edmonton.

When the Edmonton Bulletin ceased publication in 1951, Burke found himself unemployed and decided to try the oil business; he then got a job as pipe-racker on a Leduc drilling crew.

"This meant I had to heave 90-foot lengths of pipe around," he recalls, "and I soon found that the pipe-racker was getting more racked than the pipe. To put it mildly, I tired of the oil business."

Burke then tried farming again, going to work raising more than 2,000 turkeys in the Fraser Valley district. He also began to write a column for a Vancouver paper. Things started to look good, he thought; until:

"One by one the turkeys died," he recalls. "They died of every disease known to turkeydom—and these are beyond calculation. Pathologists from UBC travelled miles to load up with a consignment of the latest Burke corpses. Then the bottom dropped out of the turkey business. So did Burke."

Burke then joined the staff of the Vancouver Sun and in 1953 went to Ottawa as parliamentary correspondent. Shortly afterwards he won the UN competition.

Having made several radio broadcasts for CBC in Vancouver and Edmonton, Burke made CBC radio's Ottawa outlet, CBO, an early call when he was transferred to Canada's capital city.

"I did a number of broadcasts and gradually acquired a real taste for it," he says. "There's something more personal about a broadcast than the same thing in print. I gradually began to realize I was getting far more fun out of broadcasting and decided to switch when the chance came."

The chance came in January, 1958, and world-traveller-turkey-farmer - oil driller - writer Stanley Burke has been CBC's correspondent at UN headquarters in New York since then.
